1 Introduction

Bibliographical entries included in this volume refer to books, articles and digital resources containing information about Ebla/Tell Mardikh. The first archaeological campaign to Tell Mardikh took place in 1964, and publications started in 1965. Since then, several bibliographical repertoires have been published. These repertoires are of two types: either published as articles in journals and as chapters in printed books, or available online as PDF files.

Four reference lists belonging to the first type have been published by Massimo Baldacci, Francesco Pomponio and Francesca Baffi Guardata in between 1966 and 1997: the first one appeared in the volume Ebla 1975-1985, while the others appeared in the journal Studi Epigrafici e Linguistici.<sup>1</sup> In addition, a selected bibliography has been published by Beld, Hallo and Michalowski in 1984, in the volume The Tablets of Ebla. Concordance and Bibliography,<sup>2</sup> which contains only articles or monographs where edition(s) of tablets are present, along with selected entries. Finally, the Keilschriftbibliographie, published annually in the journal Orientalia is also to be included in the reference list group.<sup>3</sup>

As for the second type, namely PDF resources, two reference lists are currently available online: a bibliography on Semitic linguistics, compiled by Gregorio del Olmo Lete, with a specific section for Eblaite, updated to December 2012; and a list focused on linguistics published as part of the Etymological Dictionary of Akkadian project (updated to July 2014).<sup>4</sup>

1 Baldacci, Pomponio 1987; Baffi Guardata, Baldacci, Pomponio 1989; Baffi Guardata, Baldacci, Pomponio 1993; Baffi Guardata, Baldacci, Pomponio 1997. See also further §3.

The present book aims to collect not only references primarily concerned with philological analysis of Ebla texts, but also archaeological and historical studies. Publications have been included whenever they meet at least one of the following requirements:

- they offer an in-depth study of Ebla evidence;
- the focus on Ebla is secondary, but they still have high impact on Ebla studies;
- they mention Ebla in marginal notes only, but the information is still relevant, especially in comparative perspective.<sup>5</sup>

All references included in this book will be also available as an online bibliographic database, as part of the Ebla Digital Archives (EbDA) project. The bibliographical database will be steadily updated, along with references possibly omitted in this book.

2 Structure

2.1 Usage

Although the present book is available also in print, this volume is designed primarily for digital use. The reader can search within the book for specific references: any basic PDF viewer allows the user to easily search thorough the file by the desired keyword(s). To make the search feature more effective, the following conventions are used:

- every reference contains the full surname and name of the author, separated by a comma;
- a four digit progressive number precedes every reference; the four digit number is used in the Authors index in place of page numbers and is preceded by a hashtag (#) to avoid matching results with years;
- reviews, reprints, and translations are listed both as normal references and as cross-references after the entry they refer to.

The reader can thus search the entire bibliography by:

- ‘Surname, Name’, for entries by a specific author, and by ‘Surname, Name (2016)’, for entries by a specific author in a given year;
- a four digit number, to find a specific entry;
- a cross reference, to quickly find a related document (see further).

The book does not contain hyperlinks (i.e. cross references are not clickable) because more than 800 cross references are present, and the final file would have been heavy and difficult to manage.

<sup>5</sup> This is the case for example for Rebecca Hasselbach’s Sargonic Akkadian (2005), whose structure has been followed by Amalia Catagnoti in La grammatica della lingua di Ebla (Catagnoti 2012a, p. 3).

2.2 Indexing Principles

Entries are ordered alphabetically by author and chronologically by year. Entries referring to one and the same author are listed under a header. For co-authorships, the header spells out all the authors; et alii is used in the header when the number of the authors is six or more. Since using et alii leads in some cases to ambiguity,<sup>6</sup> in these cases as many names as necessary are spelled out to avoid twins headers.

As for the alphabetical order, 'de' is ignored in Spanish surnames. In Italian surnames, the apostrophe stands as space, while surnames with 'de' or 'di' are listed under the letter D. In Dutch and German names 'van (de)' or 'von' are ignored in the alphabetical order. Entries for each author(s) are listed in chronological order: entries belonging to the same author and to the same year are distinguished by a progressive alphabetic character placed after the year of publication. Notice that if the entries for a given year are more than 26, i.e. more than the letters of the Latin alphabet, a plus sign (+) is added between the number and the progressive alphabetic character (a-z).<sup>7</sup> References belonging to the same author(s) and year are listed in the following order:

1. monographs (if more than one, alphabetical order by monograph title);
2. editorships (if more than one, alphabetical order by volume title);
3. articles in journals (if more than one, alphabetical order by journal title; if more than one in the same journal, by page number);
4. articles in miscellanea (if more than one, alphabetical order by volume title; if more than one in the same volume, by page number);
5. other.

In addition, all entries are numbered consecutively from 0001 to 2668. A hashtag (#) precedes the four digits number to avoid matching results with numbers corresponding to years. These numbers are used in the authors alphabetical index at the end of the volume in place of page numbers.

2.3 Abbreviations and cross-references

Abbreviations adopted here are according to the Register Assyriologie, published in the journal Archiv für Orientforschung. Journals are always abbreviated if included in the Register Assyriologie, otherwise they are written out in full. Collective volumes are abbreviated only if occurring more than three times. Abbreviations of collective volumes which are not included in the Register Assyriologie have been abbreviated according to common use. Review articles are listed among the 'articles in journals' and under the name of the reviewer. The titles of review articles have been standardized as follows:

<sup>7</sup> Letters are not reduplicated as in common usage: reduplication would lead to overlapping results (see for example 1986a and 1986aa), while the plus sign (+) clearly distinguishes the entries (1986a and 1986+a).

Name, Surname (year). Review of «Book Title by Name Surname». Journal, 1, pp. 1-5.

Bibliographical references mentioned in the introduction are abbreviated to 'Surname (year)' to avoid matching results with the main references list. Wherever needed, entries contain a cross-reference to the following related documents (all included in this volume):

- reviews: cross-reference to a review is listed after the book entry;
- translations: cross-reference to a translation is listed after both the original entry and its translation;
- reprints: cross-reference to a reprint is listed after both the original entry and the reprint;
- co-authorships: cross-reference to a co-authorship is listed for each of the authors under the related author section, at the end of the related year.

Any cross-reference, with the exception of co-authorships, is included in square brackets. All cross-references are specified by an arrow (→) followed by the author's name and year, such as [→ Archi, Alfonso (1985h)].

3 Previous Eblaite Bibliographies

The term 'Eblaite bibliographies' is used here to refer to the four reference lists published by Massimo Baldacci, Francesco Pomponio, and Francesca Baffi Guardata. The authors started the project after the Keilschriftbibliographie abandoned the thematic categorization with no. 44 (1983). The first 'Eblaite bibliography' was published in 1987 in the volume Ebla 1975-1985,<sup>8</sup> and subsequent updates have been published in the journal Studi Epigrafici e Linguistici.<sup>9</sup> Their content can be described as follows:

- Bibliografia eblaite [= Baldacci, Pomponio (1987)]: published in Ebla 1975-1985. Contains entries from 1966 to 1985, and articles in press in 1986.

8 Cagni 1987.

9 See Baldacci, Pomponio 1987, p. 430 and n. 1.

- Bibliografia eblaita II [= Baffi Guardata, Baldacci, Pomponio (1989)]: contains references to works published between 1986 and 1988, references to those published before 1986 which were not present in the first Bibliografia eblaita, and some references to forthcoming works (the publication of which was expected by 1989).<sup>10</sup>
- Eblaite Bibliography III [= Baffi Guardata, Baldacci, Pomponio (1993)]: covers the years 1989-92, ending with December, 1992.<sup>11</sup>
- Eblaite Bibliography IV [= Baffi Guardata, Baldacci, Pomponio (1997)]: updated until March, 1997.<sup>12</sup>

The 'Eblaite bibliographies' mention works which were in press at the time the collections were composed: the reader can find the updated bibliographical references in the present volume. It must be noted that some of these works are still unpublished: a list of the references to papers which are still unpublished is given below.

3.1.1 SEb 5 and 6

Studi Eblaiti (SEb) 5 and 6 were supposed to contain the papers presented at the International Conference La civiltà di Ebla: Archeologia e filologia (Rome, spring 1980). Only SEb 5 has been published (in 1982), and contains the first part of the papers read at the aforementioned conference. The second part, i.e. SEb 6,<sup>16</sup> remains unpublished. Bibliografia eblaita II contains references to the papers belonging to this second part.<sup>17</sup> Some of these papers are available (in Russian translation) in Древняя Эбла Раскопки Супуу (Drevnyaya Ebla. Raskopki v Sirii).<sup>18</sup> Drevnyaya Ebla also contains (with the exception of two previously unpublished articles)<sup>19</sup> the Russian translations of several papers published in SEb 1, 2 and 5. The papers which were to appear in SEb 6, but have been published only in Drevnyaya Ebla, are:

- Scandone Matthiae, Gabriella (1983). «Le relazioni tra la Siria e l'Egitto dall'Antico al Medio Regno». In: La civiltà di Ebla: archeologia e filologia, Roma 1980. Roma, pp. 1-18. SEb 6 (= Bibliografia eblaita II no. P-44; published in Drevnyaya Ebla, see Scandone Matthiae, 1985e);
- Buccellati, Giorgio (1983). «Studies in Ebla Onomastics». In: La civiltà di Ebla: archeologia e filologia, Roma 1980. Roma, pp. 45-62. SEb 6 (= Bibliografia eblaita II no. N-22),<sup>20</sup>

<sup>17</sup> These references have not been included in the present volume, since they refer to unpublished materials. However, they are listed in this Introduction, as they are cited in the Bibliografia eblaita II, to avoid possible misunderstandings.

<sup>18</sup> Diakonoff, Matthiae 1985. But Astour 2002, p. 59, n. 14, notes that Matthiae's paper in Drevnyaya Ebla is not an exact translation of the Italian version which appeared in SEb 5. This may also be the case for Buccellati 1985 (see further).

<sup>20</sup> Although Buccellati 1985 in Drevnyaya Ebla is the Russian translation of Buccellati 1982 («Studies in Ebla Graphemics, 1», published in SEb 5), the Bibliografia eblaita II presents the reference to a paper entitled «Studies in Ebla Onomastics», never mentioned elsewhere.

- Orthmann, Winfried (1983). «Die Keramik der Frühen und Mittleren Bronzezeit im Euphrattal und ihre Beziehungen zur Keramik aus Hama und Ebla». Bibliografia eblaita II also contains references to the following papers which did not appear in Drevnyaya Ebla:

- Mazzoni, Stefania (1983). «La produzione ceramica del Palazzo G di Ebla e la sua posizione storica nell'orizzonte siro-mesopotamico del III millennio a.C.». ### 3.1.2 SEb 8

The papers read at the Conference Mari, Ebla, Ugarit: Rapports, problèmes, perspectives (held in Rome, 26th-28th April, 1984) were scheduled for publication in SEb 8. The volume remains unpublished. Abstracts of the papers read at the conference are published in Anonymous 1984. ## 4 Survey of the bibliography

4.1 General comments

The present bibliography contains 2668 references: a brief overview on this material is offered here. Publications about Ebla started in 1965, following the first archaeological campaign at the site of Tell Mardikh in 1964. A major increase in publications took place after the discovery of a first group of cuneiform tablets in 1974. This is the reason why only 45 out of 2668 references date to the years between 1965 and 1974. The histogram in fig. 1 shows the number of references per year: since this bibliography contains individual entries from four exhibitions catalogues, these have been excluded from the histogram. The total number of such entries is 410. In particular:

- 30 have been published in 1985 in the catalogue of the exhibition Da Ebla a Damasco;<sup>21</sup>
- 20 in the catalogue Syrie. Mémoire et Civilisation, published in 1993;<sup>22</sup>
- 344 are part of the volume Ebla. Alle origini della civiltà urbana,<sup>23</sup> an exhibition held in Rome in 1995;
- 16 in the catalogue Art of the First Cities, published in 2003.<sup>24</sup>

The most productive year has been 1984, with a total of 121 publications: years from 1980 to 1990 have been the most prolific in publications number, with a total of 809 articles/books.

As for reviews, fig. 2 shows the numbers of reviews per year: peaks are in 1981, 1982 and 1988, while the total amount of reviews per year decrease from 2000 onward. Wilfred G. Lambert is the author who produced the highest number of reviews for a single author (16), while the volumes Ebla. An Empire Rediscovered by Paolo Matthiae<sup>25</sup> and The Archives of Ebla. An Empire Inscribed in Clay by Giovanni Pettinato<sup>26</sup> are the books with the highest number of reviews (11 and 8, respectively).

A total number of 456 authors are mentioned in the bibliography. As it can be noticed in fig. 3, the most represented authors are Paolo Matthiae and Alfonso Archi, to whom the highest number of entries belong: 308 to Matthiae (20 in co-authorship), and 244 to Archi (8 in co-authorship).

Entries collected in this volume can be divided into seven categories, which represent different kinds of research products: the pie chart in fig. 4 shows the percentual distribution of these categories. Of all entries listed, articles (both in journals and collective volumes) are the most common kind of research product, since they represent the 70.8% of the total.

A chronological chart of the publications is offered in table 1: here are listed the main research products of the Missione Archeologica Italiana in Siria, along with volumes which are of great relevance in the field of Ebla studies.

4.2 Subject Index

The present volume is not an annotated bibliography, but a simple reference list. Nevertheless, a simple subject index is offered here, to help the reader find entries related to specific subjects. The subjects are based on the entries titles: words belonging to the titles included in this bibliography have been isolated and counted, and grouped in different categories. This operation is simple and effective, but is of course problematic for entries which have not pertinent titles. These references have been listed as 'Uncategorized'. Also, this category includes articles on subjects which are underrepresented, as they have been only sporadically object of study. Being based only on titles, the subjects directly reflect the main trends in research, and can be used to quickly gather main references related to a specific matter. The subject index is published here in two versions: as a reference list and as a network graph.

4.2.1 The subject index as reference list

In the table given below, a brief description is offered for each individual subject, alongside with the list of all the references belonging to each category.<sup>27</sup> Seven subjects are not based on the aforementioned operation of word counting:

- subject 7 'Archaeological materials and studies' groups together references to specific volumes of the series MSAE (Materiali archeologici di Ebla);

<sup>27</sup> As it has already been stressed, references in the introduction have been cite only as 'Surname (year)' to avoid matching results with the main bibliography.

- subject 25 'Encyclopedia articles' lists all the references which have been published in miscellaneous volumes;
- subject 26 'Exhibition catalogues' lists all the references to exhibition catalogues; on the contrary, chapters, sections, and single entries belonging to these catalogues have been attributed to different subjects according to their title;
- subject 30 'General works' groups together references on general topics;
- subject 55 'Reviews' lists all the reviews;
- subject 63 'Texts editions' groups together references to volumes of the series ARET (Archivi Reali di Ebla - Testi) and MEE (Materiali Epigrafici di Ebla), as well as the EbDA database, and thus represent a collection of the publications regarding philological editions of the Ebla tablets;
- subject 71 'Uncategorized' groups together all the references not included in any of the other 70 subject categories.

4.2.2 The subject index as a network graph

A network graph (fig. 5) offers a visual representation of the subject index: the nodes (i.e. the dots) represent both the single bibliographic entries and the subject categories, while the ties (i.e. the lines) connect each reference node to its subject node(s). The labels dimensions are not random, but are based on eigenvector centrality: this means that if the subject node has a high number of ties (to reference nodes), it also has a bigger label. Different colours are used only to highlight the nodes. The categories listed in the following table which are preceded by a (*) have been excluded from the graph: these subject categories would remain isolated within the graph and have no relevance to the graph dynamic.

The usefulness of this graph is twofold: first, the graph allows a quick evaluation of the main subjects and it draws attention to the most (and less) investigated topics. Second, the most interesting reference nodes are those tied to more than one subject node: note, as an example, how many reference nodes are shared between the 'Pottery and Vessels' and the 'Glyptic' subject nodes.<sup>28</sup> This graph has been created with gephi.<sup>29</sup>
